The one that got away!!

After a good run on the Saturday evening of the Bendigo ToDay (despite doing two laps of the Koolamurt scout camp), I thought I was in with a good chance on Sunday morning. I thought I was running quickly enough after a good summer of training and as I was running at Mandurang which I know pretty well, I thought I might just win.

It was a two loop Hageby. The course and my route can be seen on route gadget under B 2/13. I headed off moving pretty well and spiked the first and second control. I remembered reading an article by Hanny Alston which said she holds herself back to make sure she doesn't make errors. I thought I was being careful. The first time I went into 4th control, I didn't hit it accurately but it wasn't too bad. My first error was running out of 5th control in the gully. I ran north instead of east because I couldn't run up the hill and didn't want to believe I was running around the hill. I realized the error and found the rest of the controls on the first lap OK. I ran in to collect my second map and knew I was first because no one had taken their map. BEAUTY!!

Neil Barr was not far behind me and Jim told him at this point he was unlikely to catch me. YEAH!!

As I started the second loop I was trying to tell myself not to run too hard. As I pushed up the steep hill I thought – this is where I need to be careful- I made the mistake of getting onto the track and forgetting to navigate. This lost a couple of minutes. Despite this, I thought I was still in front. I got the next couple of controls OK, then got over the hill running towards the road and the control I had already found once thinking - I 've been here before, shouldn't be too hard. My plan was to run to the saddle and along the spur to the control.

Unfortunately, I didn't see there is two saddles – BUGGER. I ran down the gully, looked for the control AND SAW NEIL. He saw me and thought he was in the right place. That was dumb. We eventually realised we were both in the wrong place and found the control. Then everyone caught up. The pressure was really on so I tried to run harder. And made two more mistakes. I came 5th realizing if I had slowed down earlier and avoided mistakes I would have won. The one that got away!

Apologies: Peter Searle, Dianne Searle, John Wilkinson, Sue Davidson, Colin Walker, Neil Barr, Julie Flynn

Black Crow Nominations: nil

Minutes of the previous meeting were approved. Moved Louise Hall, seconded Peter Creely

Treasurer's Report: nil

VOA News: Craig reported that at the recent strategy day discussions centred on Easter 2013 and an online entry/membership system. The Eventor System would coordinate entries, membership and results and VOA is trying to interest other states and OA in the system, which was developed in Scandinavia.

Vic Relay Championships are planned for 19th August for an area between Maryborough Rd and Crusoe Rd providing the map is ready by then. A fallback map will be discussed by Peter Galvin and Jim Russell.

Easter 2013. Jim reported on progress. It will be based on Bendigo with the Bendigo Club organising the Saturday event. Planned maps are the University for the Family Relays/Sprint, Spring Gully Reservoir, Crusoe Reservoir and Mt. Alexander.

Investigation of access is underway, and the next newsletter will call for interest in the positions of course setters and controllers for each day. John Colls has been appointed as Event co-ordinator and Chris Norwood as overall controller.

Local events: no report

Permits for local events have been applied for through ParksVic .

Mapping:

Repository Strategy: no report

Mapping Progress: Some members are experimenting with using LIDAR data from COGB as the basis for drawing Orienteering maps and results so far seem to be most promising.

Junior Development: still progressing

Space Racing: The paid position of coordinator has been advertised but has not received any interest yet.

Space Racing and Primary Schools Champs will be held in term 2.

In Term 3 juniors will be encouraged to score events at the local series.

In term 4 Space Racing will be offered on Thursday evenings.

Last weekend Dubbo held its first Space Race competition.

Andrew Cameron reported on the package he is putting together to send to primary school principals, pointing out the health benefits of space racing. It will contain information to be placed into school newsletters, map, small compass and a short information video on a USB stick. Andrew has put a lot of thought into packaging and presentation so the kit will be attention grabbing for principals. A second kit will be addressed to PE teachers.

Other:

Old Trailer: should be sold.

Safety vests: will need to be paid for after invoice is submitted.

Meeting closed at 9.45 pm

Some thoughts on Orienteering footwear (inspired by my new Orienteering shoes)

So do you really need to spend money on those snappy looking Orienteering shoes or will Dunlop KT26's from Target be ok?

Salomon Spikecross

I suppose we need to look at what is necessary in a shoe in which you'll be running off track, in winter, through thick vegetation and mud, over slippery rocks through watercourses, climbing in and out of erosion gullies and so on. Apart from the fit, probably the three most important things to look for in the shoes you choose for Orienteering are grip, grip and grip....oh and you'll need a bit of protection at the front of the shoe to save your sensitive toes.

Icebug

For dry weather when you're not running in granite country, your average running shoes or trail running shoes do the job, but when you're running through steep wet forest, or on slippery rocks then maybe it's time to think about a pair of shoes with 'grip, grip, grip'. And that's what Orienteering shoes do very well (see pictures) - as well as a hard protective sole and good front of foot protection.

The grip comes in two flavours - with or without metal studs, the studs improve your grip on moss covered rocks and similar hard slippery surfaces - but don't forget to take your shoes off before you walk on your polished wooden floors.

The older style of specialised Orienteering shoes were very low in the heel with almost no padding inside and no arch support, similar to track running shoes. These were really designed for the softer running surfaces of European forests rather than the hard surfaces we often run on. Some Orienteers have no problem with this style of shoe, though many find them a bit uncomfortable. Lately though there are quite a few companies making a more normal style running shoe but with really chunky grip, and with or without metal studs.

Metal studs

MUDCLAW™ 333

Inov8 mudclaw

The British shoe manufacturer Inov8 make a large range of off road shoes (twenty-four different models!), and Salomon, who manufacture boots and runners now have a few models of shoes very suitable for Orienteering, as well large range of trail running shoes. Salomon (and probably others) have an interesting lacing system where there are no knots to tie, with the lace tucking in under the top of the shoe's tongue. In theory this would be save taping you laces, and stop them coming undone. I have a pair like this and it works well running on the road, though it remains to be seen how well they go in the bush.

There are a few other brands of Orienteering shoe around, though these seem to be more based on the older style I mentioned, but still worth checking out if your in the market for a pair of these type of shoes. Brand include VJ - quite a popular shoe, Silva (though these seem to be hard to find these days), Icebug - developed by Peter Öberg a top Swedish Orienteer, and Walsh, Jalas etc.

Where to buy them? Some brands are available from Kevin at the State Series events, or you can of course buy them online. There are a few Australian companies who supply Orienteering equipment online. Then there are the likes of Wiggle.com (who mostly do free postage), Amazon.com who are large online sellers. You can sometimes find some bargains in smaller stores (though usually limited sizes) if you search patiently. Online shoe buying is ok of course if you already own a pair of the same brand and know your size and that the shoe suits you foot, it can obviously be a bit tedious if you have to return the shoes for a different size or model.

Just a note regarding waterproofing, from my experience the Gore-tex and similar waterproof shoes don't seem to stop the water getting into the shoe, but they sure stop it getting out, so you can end up having a very squelchy run.

VJ integrator

I've an old pair of VJ's which are too narrow for my broad foot and therefore give me blisters, a pair of Silva K80's which are uncomfortable but wearable with an extra padded insole, and I've just bought a pair of Salomon Spikecross shoes, which felt very comfortable on there first (brief) test run.

Chris Creely
